

'Bo skad, a newly recognised non-Tibetic variety spoken in mDzo sgang, TAR a brief introduction to its sociolinguistic situation, sounds, and vocabulary

(Language material)

(IKOS, Universitetet i Oslo)

'Bo skad

The language name should be written mBo, based on the pronunciation /<sup>-m</sup>bo/.

A variety spoken in Tshawarong of mDzo sgang County, Chab mdo District, TAR.

Another closely related variety to 'Bo skad, called sMad skad, is also spoken in Tshawarong.

'Bo skad sound structure

- Maximum syllable structure:

E.g., -na 'sky', <sup>-N</sup>ga 'hillside', -nwə̃ 'five'

- Suprasegmentals:

Two-way word tone system, High ( - ) and Low ( ' )

E.g., -ba 'ten' - 'ba 'needle'

Pitch generally descends at the end of a word.

A tonal distinction is valid only for the first two syllables of a multisyllabic phonological word.

- Vowels:

Plain (i, e, ε, a, α, ɔ, o, u, ʊ, ɥ, ə, ɵ); +retroflexed (ə̣);

+creaky ( ɥ̣ ); +nasalisation ( ẽ ); +creaky nasalisation ( ẹ̃ )

No length contrast.

No checked syllable.

- Consonants:

Fricatives (s, z, ɕ, ʒ, x, ɣ, ʁ, β, h, fi); Resonants (m, ṃ, n, ṇ, ŋ, ŋ̣, ŋ̣, ŋ̣, N, l, ḷ, r, w, j)

Prenasalisation (voiced), preaspiration (any voicings)

'Bo skad is a non-Tibetic language

meaning	mBo	Written Tibetan	PTB (based on STEDT)
seven	ṅ̄ni	bdun	*s-ni-s (#2505)
four	ṅ̄l̄ə	bzhi	*b-ləy (#2409)
one	ṅ̄d̄ə	gcig	*tyak ≈ *g-t(y)ik (#2726)
ten	ṅ̄b̄a	bcu	*ts(y)i(y) ≈ *tsyay (#2748)

horse	ṅ̄re	rta	*s/m-raŋ(#1431)
road	ṅ̄t̄ɕu	lam	*lam (#1017)

However, many Tibetic loans are attested. An outstanding feature is that the open syllable of WrT -a# corresponds to /-ɛ/ in 'Bo, e.g.:

/ṅ̄ɛ/ 'fish' (< nya), /ṅ̄ɕe m̄ɛ/ 'sand' (< bye ma), /ṅ̄se t̄ɕʰɛ/ 'land' (< sa cha), /ṅ̄ɽɔ p̄ɛ/ 'pastoralist' (< 'brog pa), etc.

'Bo skad seems to be a Qiangic language

Some distinguished words of mBo are compared with Basum (non-Tibetic non-Qiangic; Kong-po rGya-mda), Nyagrong Minyag (rGyalrongic; Nyag-rong), Choyu (Qiangic; Nyag-chu-kha), Lhagang Choyu (Qiangic; Dar-rtse-mdo), Darmdo Minyag (Qiangic; Dar-rtse-mdo), and bTsanlha rGyalrong (rGyalrongic; bTsan-lha).

Source of data: Basum from Nicolas Tournadre (p.c.), phonetic description reconfirmed by the first author; the others from the first author's fieldwork.

Phonetic symbol-based transcription; no orthographical description applied except for suprasegmentals.

Pitch patterns written as ṅ̄ : high-level; ṅ̄' : rising; ṅ̄` : falling; ṅ̄^ : rising-falling; ṅ̄' in Lhagang Choyu: 'atonalising marker' or 'tone bearing unit terminating marker'

As seen in the word forms of 'you', 'blood', and 'meat', Basum does not seem to be a member of Qiangic.

The word 'urine' in mBo, unfortunately, suggests that this language has a different feature from Qiangic languages because this word can display a similarity among them.

Some grammatical expressions

Copulative verbs, existential verbs, and directional marking for action verbs

Copulative verbs

Egophoric copulative verb: /'ŋo/;

Non-egophoric copulative verb: /'tə<sup>h</sup>u/

- (1) a 'ŋa 'po ri 'ŋo
 1sg Tibetan CPV
 I am Tibetan.
- b -kə 'po ri 'tə<sup>h</sup>u
 3sg Tibetan CPV
 He is Tibetan.

Anticipation usage attested:

- (2) a -nə 'po ri 'tə<sup>h</sup>u
 2sg Tibetan CPV
 You are Tibetan.
- b -nə 'po ri -ʔa-ŋo
 1sg Tibetan Q-CPV
 Are you Tibetan?

The sentence construction and evidentiality distinction are quite common to many Tibetic languages, including Southern Route Khams to which the mDzogong dialect belongs.

Existential verbs

Existential verbs are employed as possession, existence, and location.

There are three two verb stems and three categories:

Egophoric existential verb: /'k<sup>h</sup>o/;

Sensory existential verb: /-ŋe/;

Factual existential verb: /'k<sup>h</sup>o tə<sup>h</sup>u/ (morphologically EXV+CPV)

- (3) 'ŋa-lə    ˀpʰo fiu    ˀdə    kʰo
 1sg-DAT pig        one    EXV
 I have a pig.
- (4) ˀkə rɛ    ˀpʰo fiu    ˀdə    ˀŋe
 there pig        one    EXV
 There is a pig. (I see it)
- (5) ˀfiŋā-kə    'nə-lə        'dʒi tʰu    'kʰo tɕʰu
 box-GEN inside-LOC pen        EXV
 There are pens in the box. (I know that)

The sentence construction and evidentiality distinction are quite common to several Tibetic languages, including Southern Route Khams to which the mDzogong dialect belongs.

Directional marking

Imperative and completed forms of general verbs should take a directional prefix. E.g., /ˀxu/ 'go':

- (6) a ˀtʰo-xu
 DIR-go
 Go upwards!
- b 'no-xu
 DIR-go
 Go downwards!
- c 'ŋa        ˀtʰo-xu-zo
 1sg        DIR-go-EXP
 I have already been over there.
- d ˀkʰə        'no-xu-tɕʰu
 3sg        DIR-go-CPV
 He has already been downwards.

Almost all the verbs must have a directional prefix when it is used in an imperative as follows:

- /'wə-/: /'wə-ᵐtʰi/ 'drink!', /'wə-ᵐdzi/ 'eat!'
- /'nə-/: /'nə-gu/ 'sleep!', /'nə-sə/ 'kill!'

This phenomenon is also attested in several dialects of Dzayul Khams and Sems-kyi-nyila Khams.

[Abbreviations]

1sg: 1st person singular	CPV: copulative verb	GEN: genitive
2sg: 2nd person singular	DIR: directional	LOC: locative
3sg: 3rd person singular	EXP: experience	Q: question marker
	EXV: existential verb
